

PHOTOPLAYS AND PHOTOPLAYERS

Photoplays Develop New Technique Is the Opinion of Miss Frederick

Study of the technique of motion picture acting is recommended to a number of the stage stars who have entered the motion picture field by some of their successful fellow artists. The cause for the failure of the stage star who is photographically correct is not making enough attention to the requirements of the camera. As has been stated heretofore and cannot be too strongly emphasized, there are some types that do not photograph, no matter how well the persons may act. But there are others that make excellent pictures and these actors and actresses are urged to study the method of making dramatic ability tell on the screen.

Pauline Frederick, who is appearing at the Lyric, today in "Zaza," is one of those who believes thoroughly in the technique of photoplays as an inspiration to better acting. Miss Frederick became well known on the stage before she entered the photoplay field.

"The statement that there is no such thing as a technique of the screen so far as the player is concerned has been made so frequently in my hearing that I would like to take this opportunity to correct it," Miss Frederick declares. "There is a screen technique which must be mastered by every one. The actor or actress who attempts to apply to his or her actions before the camera the same methods which were used with success on the stage will come to grief. Like the passing of the camel through the eye of the proverbial needle, it can't be done."

"It would be almost impossible to say just what element was the deciding factor in my choice between the stage, which I loved, and the screen, which for a long time failed to interest me, before my appearance in 'The Eternal City' for the Famous Players Film Company. Perhaps it was the limitless possibilities afforded by the photoplay. I thought that I could reach more people in one day through it than I could in a whole lifetime on the stage, and that my work would be immortalized for future generations to compare with that of players of their day."

"Another great influence in favor of the photoplay is my love of realism. When the stage is reached, a clever artist painted a backdrop which resembled Rome as well as paint canvas could. But when the camera plays into a film, we packed our trunks and hied us to Rome itself. I am a sincere believer in the photoplay as a dramatic art and in the earnest purpose of all the producers of Paramount Pictures to make the best photoplays possible and to show them at admission prices within the reach of the poor as well as the rich, thus giving to the public the finest literature, drama and music, and I want to do my part in educating the masses to a proper appreciation of the best in the theater." FORD STERLING, As He Looked Without the Comedy Make-up That Has Made Him Famous Among Photoplay Patrons.

DECISION IS REVERSED UNDERTAKERS ASKING IN HOPKINS CASE STRICT REGULATIONS

Court Returns Verdict for Defendants in Suit Against Fidelity Storage Company.

Contending that the lower court was in error in not instructing the jury to return a verdict for the defendant in the suit for damages against the Fidelity Storage Company, against whom a jury returned a verdict for $1,500 for Mary E. Hopkins, administratrix of the estate of Frank Hopkins, Chief Justice Shepard, of the Court of Appeals, today reversed the judgment and remanded the case for further proceedings. Associate Justice Robb dissented.

The company asked for a directed verdict on the grounds that no negligence in construction was apparent in the scaffold and ladder from which Hopkins fell and sustained injuries resulting in his death. In his opinion Chief Justice Shepard held that "if an employee has knowledge of the circumstances under which the employer carries on his business, and accepts the employment, he assumes such risks as are open and obvious, and he is not to be relieved of his liability by the refusal of instruction to the jury."

This Week's Photoplays

CRANDALL'S.

Aide from the second appearance in Washington of Robert Mantell as a photoplayer, the most interesting feature of "The Unfaithful Wife," in which Mr. Mantell appears at Crandall's today, is the series of scenes made at "Shadow Lawn," the Elberon, N. J., estate which has recently been secured by President Wilson to be used as a summer residence.

The pictures show some of the beauties of the great estate, which are used as settings for the various scenes of the play. Genevieve Hammer appears as Mr. Mantell's leading woman. "The Unfaithful Wife" will be shown again tomorrow and Wednesday.

Thursday and Friday Edwin Arden, well known in Washington through his connection with stock companies and lately a leading figure in Broadway theatrical productions as well as important photoplays, will be seen in an adaptation of "The Grey Mask," a detective story published in Collier's Weekly. Saturday Gladys Hanson will be seen in the Universal company's production of "The Primrose Path," by Ray and Veiller, author of "Within the Law."

LEADER.

Pauline Frederick's interpretation of the mercurial "Zaza" in the photoplay which the Famous Players Company has made of the Belasco drama, to be seen today and tomorrow at the Lyric, is a bit broader than that given on the stage by Mrs. Leslie Carter, and in a more satisfactory element of the stage production did not provide. Miss Frederick gives a spirit of youth to the part which relieves some of the tone moments without in the least detracting from her dramatic value.

Henry Arthur Jones' drama, "The Masqueraders," adapted to photoplay proportions, will be seen Wednesday and Thursday with Hazel Dawn in the role of the young girl who marries a nobleman while a bar maid and is then made the stake in a card game between her husband and a former sweetheart.

Friday and Saturday Mary Pickford will be seen in "Hags," which is regarded as one of the most satisfactory vehicles yet provided by the Famous Players Company for the display of the young picture star's personality.

ELKS OF ALEXANDRIA HAVE BIG MEMORIAL

Congressman Nicholls Pays High Tribute to Doctrines of Order.

ALEXANDRIA, Dec. 6.—Declaring that the principles in the doctrine of the Order of Elks were closely akin to those taught in the democracy of the United States, and that the Elks order was a true American order, Congressman Samuel Nicholls, past exalted ruler of the Spartansburg, S. C., lodge of Elks, delivered the address at the memorial exercises of the Alexandria Lodge of Elks last night. The speaker was introduced by James B. Martin, exalted ruler of the local order, who conducted the ceremonies.

Every number of the program was a tribute to the memory of the thirty-eight members of the order who have died since its institution thirteen years ago, and each was well received by the audience which filled to overflowing the hall in which the services were held. A selection by Miss Caroline Kast, violinist, and Mrs. Frederick P. Russell, pianist, opened the exercises, being immediately followed by the opening ceremonies of the lodge at which the exalted ruler presided, and during which Miss Mary Kannon gave a recitation of eulogizing the dead members.

Walter M. Donnelly, secretary of the lodge, then read the roll call of the thirty-eight absent brothers, and after calling out each name, the lights having been dimmed, a single light shone from the purple background of the stage. When the roll call had been finished the thirty-eight absent brothers, B. P. O. E. 758, and formed a group of stars around a large replica of the Elks emblem, the hands pointing to the hour of eleven.

Following this Mrs. William Woods, with Miss Ella Hays as accompanist, sang "Open the Gates of the Temple," and then a quartet composed of Mrs. Harrie White, soprano; Mrs. M. B. Fowler, contralto; Kenneth W. Oden, tenor; and Wilmer J. Waller, bass, rendered "Guide Me to the Morning Star," which was followed by the address of Congressman Nicholls. Other numbers in the order of exercises were: Duet, "Adoration," Miss Kast and Mrs. Russell; quartet, "Abide With Me," violin solo, "A Perfect Day," Miss Kannon.

The hall was once more darkened as the closing ceremonies were delivered by Jacob Brill, past exalted ruler of the lodge, who in the manner in which different countries honored their dead, until he came to the United States and the Elks lodge, a single light was turned on a waving American flag at one side of the stage. The services were closed out by the singing of "New Year, God, to Thee," by the entire audience, and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. L. M. Ferguson.

Approximately 1,100 had paid their capitation taxes to the City Treasurer, under the provisions of the State law, and the general election will take place June 13.

COL. MOSBY IS 82 YEARS "YOUNG" TODAY

Noted Confederate Guerilla Chieftain Congratulated by Men He Captured.

Col. John Singleton Mosby, guerilla chieftain and the most feared cavalry leader in the Confederate army during the civil war, is celebrating his 82nd birthday today. The grizzled warrior is still in the full vigor of health, and was today the recipient of many congratulations in person by letter and wire, on passing the four-score-and-two mile post. Among the letters were some from prominent men whom he captured during the war.

Colonel Mosby's later years have been devoted to literary pursuits, and his writings have attracted wide attention, particularly his war reminiscences and analyses of war strategy. He enlisted in the Confederate army at an early age, but his capacity for leadership soon won him promotion, and he was allowed to operate independently. He held the rank of Major-General in the army of the Chickahominy river still holds first place among the boldest pieces of daring warfare on record.
